Dear Friends,

A “relationship” is defined as the way in which two or more people are connected. We all have relationships-- we have short term ones like an interaction with a teller, cashier, or a passerby. We choose to smile and say hello, or to look down and say nothing. We also have longer-term and deeper relationships with family, friends, and colleagues. No matter who we are or where we come from, our relationships are a key part of who we are. They enrich us, comfort us, and challenge us.

At JOIN, the concept of “relationship” is at the very core of how we do the work and why we think it’s important. It’s evident in our staff culture, in our organizational values, in our approach to the work of ending homelessness, and even in our fundraising.

The work of helping people get off the streets starts with relationships. We build relationships with people sleeping outside in order to understand how we can best partner with them to support their journey from homelessness to housing. I am continually impressed by the JOIN team and their ability to navigate complicated relationships; to be present and engage with so many people; to set aside assumptions and take the time to truly listen to what someone needs to get off the streets.

At JOIN, the concept of "relationship" is at the very core of how we do the work and why we think it's important.

To support these transitions, we also have relationships with partner organizations that help people re-build their communities and access the various supports they need to do so.

As a staff, we are very intentional about building relationships with each other. It allows us to trust each other in our daily work and have each other’s backs when the days are long or hard. Even as we’ve grown and expanded, we make sure to prioritize time with each other, much like a family, so that we don’t lose sight of what makes working here special. In the last year of being a part of this family, my relationships have grown and deepened.

We foster relationships with our supporters. We want those of you who invest in our organization, whether it’s with your dollars or your time, to know how your support is utilized and what a critical difference it makes. We want to share our successes and challenges with you in a transparent and honest way.

I grew up in a community where, if I did something wrong, my mom knew before I got home. People knew each other, looked out for each other. I got into social work because I was taught that we thrive because of the community we live in. My mom regularly gave away my room to a friend or neighbor who was “down on their luck”. This rotating cast of friends opened my world to people with different experiences and life paths. I became enamored with listening to people’s stories and building new friendships.

I got into social work because I was taught that we thrive because of the community we live in.

We are in the midst of a very difficult time in our community – a time when there is pretty constant conversation about the challenges of homelessness and the housing crisis. I am in many ways grateful for this heightened awareness because I believe it means that more people are engaged and figuring out ways they can be involved in solutions. My fear, however, is that amidst the noise, homeless people’s stories will be unheard, their hardships unacknowledged, and their humanity unrecognized.

So if I could ask the community to do one thing, it would be this: engage in new relationships with your neighbors, both housed and homeless. Lift your head as you walk down the street and smile at people, greet them, let them know that you really see them. You will be surprised how people respond to a smile or a kind word. Learn their names and their stories. You’ll not only build community in your neighborhood, but you will likely make some new friends along the way.

Thank you,

Shannon Singleton

"What I most like about having an apartment now is having a kitchen, a cabinet full of food, a refrigerator full of food and a nice little garden outside to make my home."

-Bob (right)

"We're so grateful to have this place and for everything JOIN has done to make it possible. We wouldn't be here without you."

-Sarah and Greg (left) with their son Brandon

"When I moved to the US, I was diagnosed with cancer and I ended up homeless for months after my surgery. Now, even though I'm still sick, I can have a good meal, another year to share with my son, and a very nice apartment to live in."

-Clara (right) with her son

"After being outside for five years, I'm grateful everyday for living indoors and sleeping on a bed. I love having a place where my nieces, nephews and grand-kids can visit. I get to see them so much more now."

-Claire (left) with pictures of her family on her new wall

"I love it when there are toys on the floor, because it means my grandkids were here."

-Loretta (below)

"I'm going through so much physical pain, but it's ok now because I don't have to always move and rebuild and move and rebuild like I did when I was homeless. I'm safe now, I'm stable."

-Governor (above)

"We're so grateful to JOIN. It's nice to have people in your corner who want you to do well and give you the opportunity to succeed. We're working and paying our own way now, but we wouldn't be here without that initial boost at the beginning."

Home is the catalyst to opportunity

Everyone in our community deserves a safe place to call home and an opportunity to succeed. JOIN is helping an average of 10 neighbors each week transition out of homelessness and into opportunity, safety, stability, and hope.

"I'm proud of my story because everything that I've been through has made me who I am today. I'm happy that my stress right now is coming from my Business Communication class, and that I have things to look forward to like getting married and earning my degree! I was homeless for twenty years, after I started using hard drugs at age 12. I didn't have any self-respect or pride back then; everything was an unconscious decision to feed my addiction. My apartment changed how I view myself and gave me the control to say 'No' to old influences. I'm proud of who I am and the work that I've put in to get here." -Mandy (left) with her JOIN Retention Worker and friend, Colleen

For Mandy and so many others, stable housing is the catalyst to educational and employment opportunity. You can invest in opportunity with a recurring or one-time gift to JOIN at joinpdx.org/donate.
